

Dreaming for the Unborn Child

You are invited to be part of a Social Dreaming Matrix. The task of this dreaming matrix is to offer and share dreams that relate to the 'unborn child' and to make connections and associations to the dreams of others.

The Social Dreaming Matrix is a methodology which enables people to come together and explore dreams around a topic of mutual interest.

The intention of this Social Dreaming Matrix is explore and connect with deeper, richer and intuitive understandings of the wonder and mystery associated with the unborn child.

This methodology was developed by Gordon Lawrence and colleagues at the Tavistock Institute of the UK in the early 1980's. It has been used in a variety of countries including Australia, Germany, Canada, Israel, Sweden, the UK and the US to explore and make connections between people around issues of interest at a deeper and richer level than is usually possible through more conventional discussions. The topic for this dream matrix was inspired by Jacqueline Sirota who is a consultant in the UK.

Sara Taylor and Jane Lowther will be working as consultants to this dreaming matrix. The role of the consultants will be to make connections and associations with the dreams. No previous experience is necessary for participants to the Dream Matrix. All that is required is a willingness to explore and be open to one's own and other's dreams.

Those who may be interested include:

- Expectant parents and couples
- Parents and couples trying to conceive
- People who have a strong sense of a child waiting to be born

The Social Dreaming Matrix will be conducted through the Centre for Socio Analysis. More details on the Centre for Socio Analysis and a number of readings on Dream Matrixes can be found on their website at www.acsa.net.au
